A cat with a neoplastic lesion of the urinary bladder was presented. The tumor was clinically characterized as a neoplasm, but was composed of only mesenchymal elements, as determined by light microscopy and ultrastructural examination. The neoplastic cells were separated by a fibrous stroma and were strongly immunoreactive with cytokeratin and vimentin, but were negative for S-100 protein, muscle-specific actin, and desmin. Additionally, the cells were strongly immunoreactive with the monoclonal antibody to IgM and were regarded as a malignant mesenchymal neoplasm. This report is the first case of bladder carcinoma-like tumor in a cat that produced immunoglobulin M. s.SetError(err) } } return nil } // If we got this far we must be successful. s.NoError(ctx.Validate(), "pushed a viewset in a view called '%s'", t.Name()) // If the viewset's parent is in the context, push it. if viewSetParent, ok := ctx.GetOk("viewset_parent"); ok { // Push the viewset's parent s.Set("viewset_parent", viewSetParent.(string)) } // If the view
